MAX FIEDLER, CONDUCTOR OF BOSTON SYMPHONY ORCHESTRA

At Jackson's, Next Monday, December 13

The Boston Symphony Orchestra has been called in the past "An orchestra of virtuosi" and if this was true five years ago when the phrase was coined, it is true to-day. With the possible exception of the orchestra of the Paris Conservatoire, there is no organization of the kind in the world that contains so many acknowledged masters of the art and the Paris Conservatoire is hardly to be classed with the Boston Symphony because its concerts are only occasional and it lacks the opportunity for complete drilling that the Boston Symphony has.
It would be difficult to say which section of the orchestra excels. Its strings are wonderful in their plangent brilliancy and in the ease with which they overcome technical difficulties of greatest magnitude. The wood-wind section is celebrated wherever the fame of the orchestra has penetrated, while the brass section with its horns and trumpets and trombones is on a par with the others. In the strings are such famous violinists as Hess, Noack, Roth, Kuntz, Kraft, Theodorowicz, and Barleben; Warnke, Keller, Belinski, Kautzenbach among the cellos; Ferir, Gletzen and Rennert among the violas; Keller, Huber and Agnesy among the double basses; men all of them famous as virtuosi of their instruments aside from their work in the orchestra. In the wood-wind section is Longy, unquestionably the greatest master of the oboe in the world, and only less famous than he are Andre Maquarre, the first flute, Grisez, the first clarinet and Sadony, the first bassoon. In the horn sections are Max Hess and George Wendler, artists that are the envy of every other orchestra in this country, while in Klopfer the orchestra possesses probably the finest trumpet in the world. These names are simply picked out at random for what is said of them is true probably of every other member of the orchestra, for the orchestra has been organized regardless of expense, the sole purpose being to make it better than any other in the world and in the twenty-nine years of its existence it has held undisputed place among the bands of America and now is unquestionably the greatest orchestra of the world. Mme. Rider-Kelsey, a soprano of recognized ability has been secured as soloist for the concert to be given here. To-morrow morning at 9 o'clock the opening of the sale will take place.

Wires Swept Away By Fierce Gale

(Special from United Press)
Buffalo, Dec. 8.—Hundreds of linemen are at work today repairing the damage to the telephone, telegraph and electric lighting systems in this city and vicinity caused by the seventy-two miles an hour gale which swept in from the lake last night. Wires went down throughout the city and hundreds of homes and stores were in darkness. Lake navigation is officially closed but some fear is felt for several boats still overdue at this port.

Wet tea leaves will drive away roaches.

JEWELRY NEWS FOR XMAS BUYERS

ACTING on our suggestion, many have already bought their Christmas jewelry, and we, according to our custom, have laid it away in our vaults, to be called for and paid for when it is wanted. If you have not already joined the Buechler Lay-Away Custom, will you not do so soon? We engrave inscriptions on Christmas presents without extra charge. Please place your orders for engraving early. There is a limit even to our facilities, and pretty soon we shall be rushed with Christmas orders.

All our diamonds are imported direct, hence the economy in buying from us Diamond Rings, Ear Rings, Bracelets, Locketts, Brooches and all other forms of Diamond Set Jewelry.
